

21215 - Instilling the love of the Prophet in the heart of a child

the question

How can we develop love of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) in the hearts of our children? I have a young daughter – what can I do with her to achieve this?

Detailed answer

Praise be to Allah.

There are a number of ways to instill love of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) in the hearts of our children, such as:

- The parents can tell them the stories that have been narrated of the children of the Sahaabah at the time of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him), how they fought those who tried to harm him, how quickly they responded to his call and obeyed his commands, and how they loved that which he loved, and how they memorized the hadith of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him).

- The parents should help her to memorize as much hadith as she can of ahaadeeth, and reward her for that... One of the things that was narrated concerning that was the words of al-Zubayri: Maalik ibn Anas had a daughter who memorized his knowledge – i.e. al-Muwatta'. She used to stand behind the door and if a student made a mistake she would knock on the door, and Maalik would be alerted and would correct him. And it was narrated that al-Nadar ibn al-Haarith said: "I heard Ibraaheem ibn Adham say: 'My father said to me, O my son, seek hadith, and every time you hear a hadith and memorize it, I will give you a dirham, so I learnt hadith in that way.'"

·They should teach her – according to her level of understanding – about the life of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) and his military campaigns, and the lives of the Sahaabah, both men and women – may Allah be pleased with them, so that she will grow up loving these noble people, and be influenced by their behaviour, and will be keen to strive and sincere in correcting herself and supporting her religion.

·The Sahaabah and the salaf (early generations) were keen to teach their children about the life of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him), and they would teach it alongside teaching the Quran, because his seerah is the interpretation of the the meanings of the Quran, as well as stirring up emotions and demonstrating true Islam and having a wondrous effect on the soul. It also carries the meanings of love and jihad to save mankind from misguidance and bring them to guidance, from falsehood to truth, from the darkness of jaahiliyyah to the light of Islam.

When telling their daughter about the life of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) and the lives of the male and female Sahaabah (may Allah be pleased with them), the father and mother must tell her about things that she can relate to, such as the childhood of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him), some stories about his life with (his wet-nurse) Haleemah al-Sa'diyyah, and how Allah bestowed goodness and blessings upon Haleemah and her family because of him (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him), the night of the Hijrah and how Allah covered the eyes of the mushrikeen, and other stories which demonstrate how Allah helped him. Thus the girl's heart will be filled with love for Allah and love for His Messenger (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him). It was narrated from 'Ali (may Allah be pleased with him) that the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be upon him) said: "Train your children to acquire three characteristics: love of your Prophet, love of his family and reading the Quran, for the bearers of the Quran will be in the shade of Allah on the Day when there will be no shade except His, with His Prophets and His chosen ones." (Narrated by al-Suyooti in al-Jaami' al-Sagheer, p. 25; classed as da'eef by al-Albaani in Da'eef al-Jaami' al-Sagheer, p. 36, no. 251). It would be a good idea if the parents devote a suitable time for teaching the life of the Prophet (peace and blessings of Allah be
